ROTEL BILLS WHICH SPEAK LOUDLY FOR THE LEADERS.

Salaries Will Be Whittled Down by the General Assembly at Indianapolis-D. A. 60's Case on the Docket-Perhaps the General Officers Will Be Elected To-Day Some of the Prominent Candidates.

SPECIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD.1 INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 21. - The Committee on Law has not quite completed its report, but the case of District Assembly 49, of New York City, will be the first matter of business brought before the Knights of Labor Convention this morning. When this case has been adjudicated the delegates will listen to the report of the Committee on This statement will show conclusively that there has been too much extravagance and too free a omcors.

It is thought that the astaries are all too high, and a resolution will be introduced to-day providing that no member of the General Executive Board shall be paid for any service more than 43

ing that no member of the General Executive Board shall be paid for any service more than 48 per day.

It is said that the charges in the account of A. A. Carifon, ex-member of the Executive Board, are snamefully exorbitant. In one month his bill for telegrams was $38.25.

In the same month his postage account showed that he had written an average of ten letters each day, and his charge for cab hire in New York City 10 one day was over $12.

Treasurer Turner is denounced for paying the bills without first calling the attention of the General Executive Board to the matter.

One of the New York delegates said to The Evening World correspondent this morning: "We are striving hard to make some reform in the trainsaction of our financial affairs.

"The large influx of membership and the very large amount of money found in the general treasury a couple of years ago prompted a profligate reaching for high salaries and an unwarranted expenditure of the funds of the Order. When one looks over an attempted itemined account of the expenditures by the General Executive Board, and finds that not a single one of them charged leas than $1,000 for horder appears a look to comprehend the extent of the digestive power maintained by a hard-fisted yeoman who has been turned loose upon a hotel larder.

"Or course all legithmate expenses should be paid. When a fellow reflects, however, that if a man was to board at a hotel 360 days in a year at 50 per diem his bill would be only $1,000, and that A. A. Carleton gormandized $1, 115 at hotel tables in one year, his faith in the genterman's sincerity of purpose in somewhat shaken. Oh, yes, we must reform."

Should the Finance Committee comblete its re reform."

Should the France Committee comblete its report early in the atternoon session the election of general officers will be proceeded with. There is considerable speculation among the delegates this microsing as to who will be the new officers elected by this Assembly. For General Master Workman Powderly is the only man how thought of. All officers and of the race.

rowderly is the only man now usuaget to interest as one of the race. Martie & Hanley, the nominee of District Assembly 49, was withdrawn.

There is some wide guessing as to the eight names the General Master Workman will submit to the Convention so that it may select therefrom the names of the four members of the Executive Board.

A careful canvass among the delegates this a corning indicated that among the eight the following names will surely appear: Ira B. Aylesworth. of Baltimore; Alexander W. Wright, of Toronto; James J. Holland, of Florids; Morris L. Wheat, of Iowa: Alexander Seaton, of Maine; Thomas B. McGuire, of New York; Robert D. Layton, of Pennsylvania; Henry C. Traphagen, of Ohio.
Any four of these will be acceptable to Mr. Powderly.

A LIFE FIGHT IN THE SEA. BASEBALL BY NEW RULES.

DR. MONCREIFF'S RESCUE OF A STEERAGE PASSENGER.

Terrible Struggle, in Which the Rescued Man Had to Be Struck on the Head with a Tiller-Six Feet of Strong Ruman ity's Frantic Efforts to Commit Suicide

The Ethiopis, of the Anchor line, which has just arrived at pier 41 North River, brings with her a hero. Dr. Scott Monerieff, a young physiman, one of her passengers, gallantly cast himself ato the sea during the veyage to rescue from drowning one of the steerage passengers, William Wilkle, a Scotchman from Glasgow.

The Ethiopia steamed gayly down the Clyde, then across the North Channel, and hove to at Moville, on the extreme northern coast of Ireland, at the entrance to Lough Foyle. The Anchor line boats touch at Moville to pick up 'Derry passengers. Londonderry lies a few miles from the southwestern extremity of Lough Foyle. The Ethiopia reached Moville at 8 a. M. and left at 1 in Doctor Monorieff, an active, athletic young fellow of twenty-six, thought he would go ashore with two companions just for the fun of the thing. Londonderry is only nine hours out—from Glasgow, nd the passengers do not usually feel and inclination to get off at Moville, but it is occasionally done.

He did not go till the middle of the forenoon, and had very little time to stay, as it was a difficult task to work the arnall sailboat back to the Ethlopia in the face of the stiff easterly wind which was

It was a nasty day, a raw, chilly wind blowing one purple, and the choppy, sullen sea tesaing itself white as the heaving waves broke into white caps, and driving mists made cape coats a comfort. When they were near the Ethiopia they saw a tall, heavy man drop from the upper deck into the ugly sea. He sank for a moment, then came to the surface and threw his arms about wildly.

Dr. Monerieff saw the drowing man. He did not deliberate a moment. He tore off his cape coat and in his dark suit of Scotch tweed plumped into the water.

The saliboat was about forty rods from the struggling man. Cumbered as he was with his ciothes, soncrief struck out for the fellow and reacned him. But the man had cast himself into the sea with salicidal intent, and sunned and desperate, his eyes glaring wildly, he struggled frantically with his would-be rescuer.

He was nearly six feet high and almost fourteen stone in weight, but he was happily not as muscula ras he looked.

Dr. Moncrieff is a compact nervy fellow with well-knit, square shoulders and vigorous bloops. He held his own, and though Wilkie, (the drowning man's name was William Wikie), tore his shirt and collar, Moncrieff was able to keep him up as well as himself till the sallboat had worked up alongside.

The police have not interfered in any manner with the pool-rooms, and the business is run so quietly and so secretly that detectives cannot gain admittance to them.

A VARIETY OF OPINIONS AS TO THE RESULT OF THE CHANGES.

Managerial Experts Say the Innovation Are Good, While Some Stars of the Diamond Are Inclined to Kick-Hewitt Says Johnny Ward Can Have His Way if Washington Can Only Have Him.

After the late sessions of the joint Committee ast night, at the Fifth Avenue Hotel, the baseball men who had thronged the corridors all day, discusing the changes that had from time to time been announced, were not so thoroughly talked out that they were tired enough to go to bed right

Opinions were canvassed way into the small nours, and as a result, the gathering in the vicinity hours, and as a result, the gathering in the violaity of the League meeting room this morning was rather a small one, considering the importance of the session that was about to be head.

The discussion of the new rules adopted by the Committee, which held its assaion yesterday, has brought out a great variety of opinions.

With regard to the reduction to four balls on the mitcher and the abolishing of the foul tip, however, there seems to be but one opinion among the best critics of the national game—that increasing the bataman's chances, as the change undoubtedly does, will result in making the playing livelier and more interesting.

does, will result in making the playing liveller and more interesting.

This is the opinion of Harry Wright, Welter Spaiding, Manager Mutrie, President Day and all experienced baseball judges. It will not, of course, make it any essier for the batsman to hit the ball, but it will increase his chance of reaching first base, which will be a distinct gain for base-running, which is the deligit of grand stand crowds, to say nothing of the bleaching board contingent.

A few star players like Mike Kelly, on the other hand, seem to regard the change as a sort of slut upon their abilities as leather-pounders, and say in an off-hand way that they cannot see what good it upon their abilities as leather-pounders, and eay in an off-hand way that they cannot see what good it will do, as it is easy enough to hit the bail now, and that the pitchers ought to have some chance. Tom Eaterbrook thinks it would have been better to adopt the high and low ball system if it was the intention to do snything for the batters, for there are a good many players, especially among the old men, who never have any difficulty in swiping a low ball every time, while they cover themselves with ignoming in trying to rap a high one, and slice versa.

However, the general opinion is that the Committee dedident which y upon this point.

In regard to sacrifice hitting and the abolishment of the error column, there is a great deal of dissatisfaction expressed.

The committee triad hard last night to establish an accurate dedinition for "sacrifice hit," and sinally decided that it was any sort of a hit that advanced a base-runner, no matter whether it was intended to advance him at the batter's expense or not, or whether the base was made on the error of the fielder handling the ball. This was necessary in order to do away with the error column.

Old players like Harry Wright regard the abolishment of the error column as a change too sweering, and be, in particular, condemned it as likely to have a tendency to make the playing loose in the field.

Then, according to Mr. Wright, the definition to have a tendency to make the playing loose in the field.

Then, according to Mr. Wright, the definition gives to a sacrice hit is altogether inaccurate, which, if it was considered in its proper light, would be developed to great advantage in general playing.

The players themselves, however, are as a rule, in favor of the new system of scoring adopted. How it will work in making up individual fielding and batting averages as a question about which no one seems to have troubled himself.

Manager Walter Hewitt, of the Washington Club, was one of the early comers this morning. It has been stated that his club has the call on Johnny Ward, the shortstop, and Mr. Hewitt was interrogated upon this point by an EVENING WORLD reporter.

rogated upon this point by an Evening World reporter.

I cannot say that I have a refusal on Ward," he said, "any more than the Boston Club, which is know is crary to get him. I suppose it will all depend on who bids the highest.

"I want Ward to come to Washington, and can promise him at least three years' management of the nine, and I will go as high as I can to get him. I won't nay any faucy prices though.

"Yesterday, I understand, Beton made a hid of 25,000 for his reiense, but I also hear that the New York Club won't let him go under a much higher figure. It's all nonsense to talk about $20,000, however, for no one will pay that for him." I admit that the Boston crowd has got the most money," Mr. Hewitt added rather ruefully, "and they will probably get him in teend, I supply and they will probably get him in teend, I supply and they will probably get him in the end, I supply the supply and they will probably get him in the end. and they will probably get him in the end, I sup-man tasy was probably get as in the end, is suppose.

"Billings would buy up every player in the United States if he had the money, and he might then win the championship. I don't think Ward could do much with those players up in Boston anyway, for they all think they know something about bull-playing, as well as himself, and he would be bound to get into trouble. In Washington he could have his own way, and might make something with the nine."

The talk is now all in favor of the Cleveland Cinb being admitted to the Leugue, and the question is regarded as practically settled.

BOLD DIAMOND ROBBERY IN BOSTON. imen Lewis's Loan Office Window Broken In and His Door Chained.

BOSTON, NOV. 21.—Simon Lewis keeps a loan office on Kneeland street. Last evening a welldressed woman entered and asked to see son young lady. Simon himself was in the private dress goods. Simon's daughter waited on the young lady. Simon himself was in the private office.

Meanwhile, a well-dressed man who had been loilering about and gazing into the window, sauntered up to the door, made a casual survey of the latter as well as the window, and then mingled with the passing throng.

In a second hims Lewis was startled by the crash of glass. She saw a stone fall through a hole just made in the piale-glass window, and through this hole a man's hand was projected, grasping a tray containing ten diamond rings. Miss Lewis rushed to the door, but was unable to open it.

Proprietor Lewis, taking in the situation, also endeavored to force the door, but failed. The thief, becoming rattled, dropped the tray with six of the rings on the inside of he window, and also dropped two rings upon the sidewalk, making his escape with but two valued at fice.

A friend of Lewis's, attracted by the unusual noise, crossed Kneeland street to the store and found that a chain with two Yale looks, one at each end, had been attached to the handle of the door and to an iron gate or screen which served to protect the window.

By filing the chains the friend liberated Lewis and daughter, as well as the female customer. The latter, it is alleged, quickly made her departure.

The saloon owners present mought the suggestion a very novel one and smill auxibily.

Mr. Milliken, of the Kinga County Early-Closing League, denounced the New York and Brooklyn saloon-keepers. He said liquor-dealers were not entitled to consideration, and tant at least one-half of them ought to be in State's prison. The very fact that a man who wanted to become a saloon-keeper was required to furnish a certificate of good character was, he said, a sufficient presumption that he was a bad man.

Mr. Carpenter testified that he supposed at the time of the alleged sale eight years ugo that Mr. Ivins has full-right to sell—the stock outright and that when he found otherwise he tried to get Mr. Ivins to return Mrs. Stone's money, but in vain. Mr. Carpenter was Secretary of the International Chemical Company at the time.

[From the Troy Press. ] On Fifth avenue the other night, somewhere along about the midnight hour, a window was raised and a woman's head penetrated the chill night air. In a clear, mezzosoprano voice she yelled: "Police! Police!" No police came. They never do up in that quiet neighborhood. But the woman kept up her yelling. She was alone in the hense, and she had heard mysterious noises downstairs. She was alarmed. Right next door resides a gentleman who is holding a position in the Post-Office. He had been downtown late looking for encouraging reposition in the Post-Office. He had been downtown late looking for encouraging returns, and it took some time to awaken him, but the woman's cries finally aroused him, and he pushed up his own window to inquire of his neighbor what the matter was. She wailed that some one was in her house, and asked: "Who do you suppose it can be?" The good, old, stanch Democrat, who was half asleep, answered: "I suppose it must be some Republican—they're getting in everywhere now. Wait until I get on my pants and I'll go and see." How the Pet Was Decided.

[From the Macon (Ga.) Istegraph.]

Those who went into Agricultural Hall during the fair were puzzled over the figure of a negro in a buggy that was hitched up to a wooden horse, in the display of Summers & Murphy. Thousands of people could not tell whether it was a real live negro or a stuffed figure with face of black wax. Bets on its being one or the other were freely made. Some thought that it was human and some thought it was wax. Those who thought it was alive resorted to all sorts of ingenious ways to attract its attention, but the eyes were fixed on the wooden horse, the hands kept their grip on the lines and the figure was notionless.

Yesterday the question was settled. A man who had quite a sum bet that the figure was real live negro, halted near the buggy, and, after a moment or so of conversation with another man, exclaimed;

"And Harrison wasn't elected!"

Quick as thought the figure pushed its hat back over its head and said;

"Bet you $5 he was!"

LONDON, Nov. 21. —Another Whitechapel murder

was attempted in George street, a short distance from the scene of the last horror, this morning. A man and woman had spent the night in the latter's room. At 9 o'clock this morning the fellow attacked the woman flercely with a long, sharp knife, and suc-ceeded in inflicting a frightful gash in her throat,

The woman struggled desperately and succeeded in raising such an alarm that the man falled to emplete his work and was obliged to run away. He was seen running by three men who lived in lodging-house near at hand, and they promptly started in pursuit of him.

The fellow threaded his way adroitly through the crowd, and choosing his course among the narrow streets and alleys with a quickness which proved his thorough familiarity with the locality. he successfully cluded his pursuers and finally dis-

LATER-THE WOMAN SPEAKS. LONDON, Nov. 21. -The woman attacked in the Whitechapel district this morning has recovered sufficiently to tell something of the man who sounded her.
She says he is about thirty years old, tall, fall and wearing a light mustache. He was well pressed, spoke with a purely English accent and from his conversation was evidently well acquainted with Whitechapel and the habits of the women there.

The name of the intended victim of to-day is Farmer.

From the information which she has given, the police have gained new confidence and believe new that they can run the murderer down.

But the Populace Insist That the Would-Be Marderer Is "Jack the Ripper"-No Arrests

INFECIAL CARLE TO THE EVENING WORLD, I LONDON, Net. 21—LATER.—The police have been investigating the latest Whitechapet strocky all the forenoon. It is now stated that the Scottand Yard authorities are not of the opinion that the attempted murder was the work of the Whitechapei flend. Nothing, however, can convince the excited populace that it was other than "Jack the Ripper." There is a widespread opinion that the police are throwing dust in the public's eyes.

No arrests have yet been made. The excitement among the people continues, and the streets of the Whitechapel districts are thronged with excited mobs.

AN ANTE-WAR ROMANCE FROM KEENE. Mr. and Mrs. Cogswell, Separated by Strange

Circumstances, Will Boon Most Again. [RPECIAL TO THE SYNNING WORLD ] KRENE, N. H., Nov. 21. - A few years prior to the Civil War two young people of Keene, the girl a Miss Horsche, the man a youth named Cogswell, married against the wishes of the bride's parents. They removed to Lowell, Cognwell was unsue cessful there and, sending his wife to her father's home, he journeyed to South America in quest of fortune. The husband wrote at intervals and re-fortune. The husband wrote at intervals and remitted a share of his earnings to the young wife, but, singularly as it seemed to him, no responses were vouchasfed.

Discouraged, he became a wanderer, turning up the Florida at the outbreak of the rebellion. Enlisting in the Southern army, Cogswell rose to a licutenancy, served through the war, returned to Florida and there purchased a small plantation. Believing that death had robbed him of his first wife, Cogswell married arain, but his second wife died recently, leaving him a widower, as he supposed, for the second time.

He was moved to write to former friends in this dity and to his surprise learned that his first wife was still nive, dwelling here, and that he was the father of a daughter how a young lady.

Mrs. Cogswell No. 1 had obtained a divorce through the advice, it is stated, of her father, who is supposed to have intercepted the letters written by the wandering husband during his South American sojourn.

eally made his bow, everybody gave him hearty applause, the blases of Monday night being missing. Charley Mitchell, in his classic posing, was also warmly received.

One of the finest audiences that ever gathered within the walls of the big building filed the theatre in the evening. Some thought that the hissing of the previous night would be repeated, but when Champion Klirain was presented the great audience gave him a rattling reception, not a hiss being heard. And the applause was renewed when Mitchell appeared.

There was a small crowd of curious people when Kirain and Mitchell, with Tom O'Nell, of this city, and Billy O'Brien, of New York, came out into Kirain and Mitchell, with Tom O'Nell, where they were joined by a party of friends.

"Kilrain looked on last night's crowd in Sansom street from the rear of the theatre and walked up to the Continental Hotel, where they were joined by a party of friends.

"Kilrain looked on last night's crowd in Sansom street," said a close friend who was standing near the chempion, "as a gathering of curious people, and he jumped on the car to get rid of them. Jake is a modest, big-hearted man, alow to take offense, but he would never have permitted any man to have pushed his hat over his eyes as stated."

Millionaire Livingstone Disappears from Florence.

He Had a Large Amount of Ready Money With Him.

The River Arno Dredged to Find His Body.

Depyright, 1888, by The Press Publishing Company (See Forh World). PARIS, Nov. 21. -There is much excitement and measiness in the American colony at Florence over the mysterious disappearance of the many times millionaire Livingstone, who for twenty years has owned one of the most magnificent palaces on the Lung Arno, and who has culan ec tric figure in society here. His most remarkable freak was to drive every fternoon at the rendezvous of the Haute See in Cascine in an English mail coach, with twenty thoroughbred horses attached, without passengers other than himself and his footman.

Recently his coach ran over and seriously injured several people, and the City Council passed an ordinance forbidding driving of more than aix horses to coach, thus preventing his indulgence of a favorite pastime.

Livingstone became melancholy and morose, and spent large sums of money endeavoring to have the ordinance repealed, but without avail.

He was born in Frankfort, whence ne went to California, where he amassed an immense fortune in mining. He cast off his family name of Le stein for the more somorous sounding English translation Livingstone, and settled in Florence. The River Arno is being dredged, and a large number of detectives have been put upon the case. Murder is feared, as it is known that Mr. Livingstone had the habits of carrying large amounts of Henry B. Livingston, of Livingston & Rogers, 48 Exchange place, was found at the Stock Exchange. He had leard all about the Florence eccentric and his horses, but could give no further information. They were not related.

E. de L. Livingston, lawyer, at 111 Broadway, and he was not related to Jasper Livingstone, sithough he had heard of his eccentricities.

An Evenne World reporter called on Comptroller Walter L. Livingston, in his office in the Brooklyn City Hail, and informed him of the report above given.

Brooklyn City Hail, and Informed him of the report above given.

'That is the first I have heard of the matter," answered Mr. Livingston. 'I am not a nephew of the Livingston you refer to; only a very distant relative, if indeed it is the one I have in my mind. Henry Brookholat Livingston, a grandson of ex-Gov. Livingston, of the Supreme Court of the United States, has lived in Florense Ior thirty or forty years, and he had a son Jasper, who was very foud of horses, as his father was. I knew them only casually, hering met the elder Livingston when I was a boy.
